A scene from 'Wizard of Oz' performed by pupils of Downs School, Compton.

Wizard of Oz a magical show

THE MANY young people of The Downs School at Compton, who took part in their school production of "The Wizard of Oz" last week may have felt very tired by the weekend, but they had every right to feel very proud of their efforts. The whole production really had a magical spin, and was as thoroughly enjoyed by its audience as it clearly was by those taking part.

This American tale of a young girl, Dorothy, who longs to fly over the rainbow, and then, thanks to a whirlwind, finds herself over the rainbow, has always had an appeal. No sooner is her wish granted, than Dorothy wants to return home, but, she is warned that she has a long and dangerous journey to make to the Wizard of Oz before she can return.

Christine Calder who last year played Nancy in "Oliver" at the school, this year had the onerous role of Dorothy, and was beautifully self-confident. Her strong, clear singing voice was a great asset to her, especially in the very difficult Jitterbugs song.

Martin Russell was a splendid scarecrow, looking as if he really hadn't a bone in his body, and he managed to keep up this illusion all the way through the play. The Tinman, Laurence Cramp, creaked his way through, and the lion, Shane Lovelock, was a cowardly as one could wish.

Penny Cotis proved a fragile-looking, but satisfactorily strong Scarecrow of the North, and her arch-enemy, the Witch of the West was played with great relief by Bill Tyson, with Catherine Vince and Jane Ridge to support him as second and third witches, and Anne Dawson, as Tibba, the chief of his skeleton staff!

A strong team of parents and staff had worked tremendously hard to provide the vast numbers of costumes needed for this truly spectacular show...

jeans and checked shirts for the farmhands and girls at Aunt Em's farm; bright, cheerful colours for the delightfully friendly and somnolent Munchkins; splendid emerald dresses for the people of Oz, and lots of imagination used in the Jitterbugs insect-style clothing and the skeletons, as well as the huge cardboard keys attached to the uniforms of the clockwork soldiers on parade outside Emerald City.

Scenery was simple but very effective... especially the house which could be picked up and whirled away (to what splendid sound-effects, too!); the bridge which always returned Dorothy and the Scarecrow to the side on which they had started; the huge television screen which showed the Witch of the West the position of his enemies, and his seething cauldron... a real witches' cavern indeed.

The play was produced and designed by Mr. Eric Sutton and music provided by an invited orchestra of staff and friends under the musical direction of Mrs. Marylin Barrell.

Other pupils taking principal parts in the large cast of this play were Karen Smith as Aunt Em, Graham Ford as Uncle Henry, Alan Harman, Joe, Adrian Treacher, Andrew Leach, Daryl West and Colin Puffet as leading Munchkins; Stephen Powey, First General; Andrew Stuart as a Private; Lorraine Fletcher as Lady of Oz; Martin Hawkins as Lord Growlie; Rachel Bussey as his daughter, and Simon Robby as the Wizard of Oz.
